

With snow being plowed up into large banks, drivers on this Bottineau street find it difficult to spot cars backing out of this apartment complex and residents of the complex cannot safely back out into the street. The city asks individuals who are creating the snow banks to haul them away from their properties and buildings to make for safer driving.

While the city deals with narrow streets, such as the one pictured above, it is also has to work with vehicles that are not being moved off the street after a snowfall. Because local residents are not moving their vehicles, the city's grader has to go around the vehicles, making a bigger ridge, while at the same time making the street more narrow.

streets in which the city grader has to go around. However, residents and their vehicles which are consistently being problematic for the city could see their vehicles towed from the street in the near future.

The city is currently looking at 12 vehicles which have not moved once off the streets since the first snowfall this winter. The police department will start this week in getting those vehicles moved from the street. If the vehicles are not moved, the police department will begin towing and owners will be charged a daily fee for storing their vehicles in the city pound.

Residents who are pushing snow into the streets are being asked by the city to eliminate that process. People who remove snow are supposed to haul the snow away.

"When they push snow into the streets they leave a real mess that the city has to clean up when our grader gets to a street, and it is not always easy to get that cleaned up if it sits there for awhile," Fulsebakke said. "People are also pushing snow up high near corners and alleyways, which are blocking drivers and pedestrians' sight. With that, there is always a chance of a bad accident. So, we need people to haul the snow away."

The city does apologize for any inconvenience because of the additional snow this year, but the city is asking local residents to be patient, safe and understanding until they can fix the issues concerning the streets.

erans and their dependants."

On Thursday, local veteran, Al Wondrasek, gave the local veterans' welcome to Nahinurk and his new office at the Tech Center, and encouraged the veterans in the area to use the VSO.

"I hope all the veterans of this area come in and visit with Dwight and discuss the veterans' programs that are available to them," Wondrasek said. "And, it is vitally important that all veterans register, so they have proof for establishment of claims, privileges, and the rights that they hold as veterans. All veterans are entitled to many benefits, and way too many veterans do not know their entitlements. So, if you are a veteran, please stop by and see Dwight."

After spending decades in the Memorial Building, the move of the VSO came because of financial reasons and to find a more easily accessible building for local veterans to conduct their business in. Prior to the move, the county was paying $5,000 to be in the Memorial Building. The county's commissioners made the decision to find a new location with a more feasible budget for the county's tax payers.

The VSO was also in the basement of the Memorial Building making it difficult for the elderly veterans to gain access to the office. It was handicapped accessible, but due to the manner the building was constructed in 1937, it was impossible to properly make it handicapped accessible. This issue played another major roll in the commissioners' decision of moving the VSO.

With the VSO no longer in the Memorial Building, the owners of building have no renters and have been faced with shutting down the building after 73 years of service to the local veterans and the community of Bottineau.

However, Wondrasek and a number of local veterans are making an attempt to rehabilitate the Memorial Building or construct a new building for the veterans of the Bottineau area.

Nahinurk welcomes all veterans to stop by his new office for a cup of coffee and discussion of what the VSO can offer them for their great service to their county.

There is an open house being set-up for the new VSO, which will take place on Jan. 12, 2011. (More information about the VSO's open house will be in an upcoming issue of the Courant as plans are set.)

The public should know that the majority of the events are based on snowmobiling; however, if someone does not snowmobile but would like to participate, they are welcome to attend. These individuals must contact the PRR prior to coming to the events.

PRR also has an age limit for some of their events. Those planning to bring children should check out the events to find out what the age limits are for each event.

For more information on PRR and the upcoming event, individuals can visit www.pinkribbonriders.com.
